“ Effective policing through consent and public cooperation ”

NEVAS Training

The UK model of policing remains much admired and imitated across the world. Based on Sir Roberts Peel's 'Peelian Principles' of 1829, the uniqueness lies in a vision of policing that is effective, not through coercion, but through consent, built not from fear but from public cooperation.

Public trust has always been at the heart of the British model of policing and that is why it remains a largely unarmed service placing importance on familiar, visible, neighbourhood policing, which builds confidence and reassurance.

Utilising accredited trainers who are ex UK Police Officers we can deliver training across the range of policing skills.

Critical to this is the ability to communicate effectively and our training includes community/ democratic policing techniques, how to interview victims, witnesses and suspects and gathering intelligence to support policing objectives.

Serious and Specialist Crime

More serious and specialist crime incidents require the police to have enhanced detective skills and our accredited UK Police trainers deliver serious and complex crime packages including:

- Senior investigating officer (SIO) courses
- Anti-corruption training
- Anti-kidnap and extortion training
- Human trafficking
- Tactical interviewing and tactical interview management
- Crime scene investigation

“ We specialise in counter terrorism training ”

- Forensic management. Our specialist trainers deliver subject matter expertise training in border policing, including ports and airport security, surveillance and counter surveillance / tradecraft, gathering and using intelligence effectively and cultivating and managing intelligence sources
- Terrorism affects countries across the world and we specialise in counter terrorism (CT) training including the EU recognised CONTEST strategy, CT security co-ordination for large events / VIPs, CT Search advisors / search co-ordinators and CT searchers.

“ Comprehensive training in firearms, public order and dogs ”

Operational Support

In support of Core Policing and Serious and Specialist Crime is our Operational Support training covering the vital areas of firearms, public order and dogs. Our specialist firearms trainers deliver firearms training from basic handling skills through to close protection, rapid intervention as well as less lethal options such as baton guns and use of taser.

Our public order trainers train up to UK level 1 standard public order teams as well as individual personal safety training including restraint techniques, handcuffing and use of batons and other personal protective equipment. We supply and train dogs for general purpose policing as well as narcotics, explosive, firearms and cash detection. The dog support teams complement counter terrorism work, border protection, general policing and firearms or public order operations.

Leadership Training and Consultancy

Our team of former senior UK police officers have a wealth of leadership experience in strategic challenges gained from their operational exposure. Alongside consultancy and mentoring we offer tailored made courses introducing theoretical models and practical tools that will assist in developing leadership skills at an operational and strategic level. Recognising the importance of leadership development of senior women police officers NEVAS Training's International Women's Programme aims to improve their skills and confidence enabling them to operate effectively in the challenging environment that women officers often face.
